I'll let you keep your first true love to yourself. That's serious. This is...
Who was the first actor you slobbered over?
For me it was Jan Michael Vincent. Ooga Chaka ooga ooga!

FIRST big, huge crush on the "big screen," (and off) it would have to be John Lennon when he was in "A Hard Day's Night." Gawd, what a HANDSOME man he was in his 20s. He had great potential for being a wonderful actor, especially in "How I Won the War" in '66/67. He was chosen to be Jesus in "Jesus of Nazareth" but all the Bible-thumpers pitched a fit so John graciously bowed out. That was the last role he accepted. It took ten years for Zefereeli (bad spelling; I think that was the director) to find a replacement in Robert Powell who did an outstanding job. It ended up being a made-for-TV thing, but still top-notch.

For some weird reason, I adored Peter O'Toole for the longest time (never considered him "my type"). Probably just adored his acting.

Always LOVED John Wayne and Jack Lemmon, too.

Gee...wonder if Jeff Lynne ever considered a movie role. I know many top directors play his music while writing/editing their films.... 😊

Hey, St. Joan, I like Peter O'Toole too, he's quite the actor. My first screen crush was Oliver Reed (when I saw him in Oliver Twist, and he was pretty young), something about that "dark and dangerous" thing.... *sigh

Jodie Foster in Walt Disney's version of Tom Sawyer. Can I pick'em, or what?
