We were all talking about what a joke the date was when we got the word that one of the change booths at work had just been robbed. We walked into the smoking break room and asked the two bosses there if it was true. Neither had yet heard a word. They thought that we were joking until both of their pagers went off at the same time. Since then both booth cashier working in that booth call in on Friday the 13th. ----- &gt; ^ .. ^ &lt; Skosh IP: Logged

I have two - make that three stories about Fri 13ths --
My mom was born on 13th of March - and had her 13th birthday on Fri 13th. She was also taking tests at school - achievement tests - and aced every one of them.

I arrived (moved) to KC on a Fri 13th - during rush hour traffic - driving an old 69 ford pickup with a larger camper unit (one that fits in a pickup) and a 10 foot UHaul on back. At the time I had my hand wrapped in an ice bag (severely sprained hand) - and it was a stick shift truck. I DID arrive safely!

LAST night 12- today around 10 am 13th -- NO PHONE!!! I arrived home after bowling last night (12th) to NO PHONE LINE service. Naturally the first thing I thought - ahh did I pay the bill - well ya I had so -- what was wrong?? A trip to phone office in the early morning - to find out the State Mowers had hit a transformer box - ALL the phones were out in my neighborhood! TALK about frustration! They had repair crews out - thank goodness!

AND HOW WAS YOUR MORNING???
