Posts: 27 From: Registered: Mar 2001	A woman from the deepest, most southern part of Texas goes into the local newspaper office to see that the obituary for her recently deceased husband is written. The obit editor informs her that the fee for the obituary is 50 cents a word. She pauses, reflects and then says, "Well, then, let it read, 'Billy Bob died'." Amused at the woman's thrift, the editor says, "Sorry ma'am but there is a 7 word minimum on all obituaries". Only a little flustered, she thinks things over and in a few seconds says, "In that case, let it read, 'Billy Bob died - 1983 Pickup for sale'

Another good one!
Thanks for the laughs.
Looking forward to more...

To his credit, when my hubby does ram a crow bar in his wallet to pry out some money, he always buys the best

Maryalys,

I love the description of your husband prying money out of his pocket with a crowbar. Have never heard of that before. We used to say that someone was so tight he squeaked.

I've never been to Alaska altho I'd love to come for some salmon. How long have you lived there? What do you miss about the lower 48 states? Anything at all?

My horoscope for today said that I would get in trouble talking to people, so am posting instead!

Around here - it isn't hubby who is tight with the pennies - tis me... oops did I jsut say that??

...and I'm not even from TX... got relatives there and they are anything BUT tight pennied.

Speaking of pennies I really need to sweep these up and remove the wheat pennies and take the rest to the bank....

I can't take credit for the "crowbar quip". I heard it on an episode of the TV show M*A*S*H* Major Hoolihan snapped at Major Burns and said, "Oh Frank ram a crowbar in your pocket and pry out a quarter for the kid" or something like that. Anyway the "crowbar" part stuck with me 🍷

We've been here since 1991. The only things I miss from "Outside" (as we call The Lower 48) are my family, certain friends, and great big ol' home grown tomatoes. The Alaskan salmon is the best! My hubby has a cousin who lives in New York City, but asks us to ship Lox made from Alaskan Salmon to her!

How much more will the Ents endure?
