Did you read the item on Drudge's Report today about damage done to the White House Offices by departing Clinton staff? It also was in the Washington Times.

It goes beyond pranks and is destruction of government property, a serious offense when I worked for the government thirty years ago.

Let's hope the people who did it are made accountable for their immoral and immature actions. I think fines and maybe jail time can result.

The missing key on the computers - the nasty email, and all the other stupidity done by the outgoing administration people. It only goes to show how childish the past administration has been. What has happened shows a total lack of respect for us the people of the US because it is the peoples house. The people responsible are low life trash! Scum! Remember the character issue? Lisa,

This is nothing to joke about. It is a serious offense to destroy Federal property.

When I worked for the Department of Agriculture we operated under strict rules concerning office equipment and other items that were government property. Everything was documented and accounted for.

We were proud to be government employees then. I'm speaking of the years 1960-62. Ancient history to most of you.

I agree Lisa their names and faces should be published and I hope the photos are their mug shots when they are booked. They should not be treated any differently than the average citizen. This is a disgrace. This is world news. We CANT allow them to go unpunished.

I heard someone on the radio refer to them as "White Trash" and I'm afraid I have to agree wholeheartedly.

This is just deplorable.

News to Ignore!
If not - every jerk at your place of business is directly your fault!

Remember, YOUR FAULT. I'm keeping track of venues.

Examples:

Everyone in Illinois is responsible for everything Jackson, Farrakhan and Daily does!!!

If you're from Texas I hold you responsible not just for Bush but for the behavior of the "Texas Seven!"

And Jesus hung-out with whores and tax collectors!

Lighten Up! 😊

I agree with Snorrithor -

Maybe some truth to the story -

Mostly hyped sensationalism

Let's set up a special prosecuter - Whitewater/The Sequel (The WhiteHouse Scam)

Convene a grand jury -

Haul 'em in front of The Supremes -

Or as said the Queen in Alice - "Off with their heads!"

PS: FYI Clinton did not fly away in Air Force One when he flew to NYC

PS: OhMyGod! The Bushes will have to hire an exorcist! 🤪

Its not just the keyboards, the glue, the door locks, but there is more - the email, the phone lines that were cut, the switchboard that was hacked and rerouted for several phone calling situations, the vandalism to walls, can all be included.

One of the regular staffers (someone who has remained as staff through more than one administration) said in all their years of work they have never seen such during prior transistions. ((as heard over a talk radio program. The man has worked almost 30 yrs in the WH general staffing dept.))

I personally hope that the people who did this will be brought to justice - made to pay for all repairs. I'd go so far as to deny any of these people gov't pensions of any kind. This type of action is deplorable!

Reminds me of the character in the Peanuts series. Remember the little fella who left dirty tracks everywhere he went? And look at the cost to the taxpayers:

"The damage thus far? One estimate has the damage from the vandalism at $200,000 – and growing. They're still trying to figure out whether or not computers are infected with viruses.

Let's see ... $200,000. If the average American family pays about $4,000 a year in income taxes, this would mean that it will take the taxes paid by 50 American families."

Vandalism Bad!!!

Cover it some more!

Otherwise --- folks might notice Our New President 😬

Notice this's got way more coverage than Ashcroft's nomination hearings?

This vandalism just goes to show us how little respect, responsibility and maturity there is today. Whether it is a bunch of teens covering someones' garage with graffiti, stealing from a neighbor, or a parent grabbing a coaches's neck in anger, it shows a decline in morals. Maybe Clinton didn't know about it, but I'm sure he's laughing about it right now. Those were his kind of people. The old saying, "the apple doesn't fall far from the tree" rings true. It is such an immature act that you would expect it of pre-teens. Even though the taxpayer will have to foot the bill for vandalism, the real issue is how the White House has, for the last 8 years, become something like a fun-house at a carnival. This was, obviously, done to poke fun at Bush's staff. By not exploiting this as the character flaws of the Clinton administration, he will bring the White House the dignity and respect it deserves.
